FORD BID HEARING AWAITS ARRIVAL OF MAYO

COMMITTEE SEEKS TO KNOW MORE OF FORD'S PROPOSALS

Amount of Return to Government Will Be Checked Up

HOOKEK AGAIN IS ON STAND TODAY

Explains Chemicals He Would Manufacture at Shoals Plant

(Associated Press) WASHINGTON, April 22—Investigation of Henry Ford's Muscle Shoals proposals by the agriculture committee awaits the arrival of W. B. Mayo, Ford's chief engineer, who is expected to appear sometime this week.

He will be questioned principally about the amount of return the government will receive from the Ford offer and provisions for fertilizer production and power distribution.

Possibility of manufacturing at Muscle Shoals two chemicals described as specific destroyers of the peach borer, and the boll weevil, in conjunction with the production of concentrated fertilizer, was held out to the agriculture committee during further consideration of the Hooker-White-Atterbury bid for the government properties.

A. H. Hooker, who is connected with the group, said he knew of no reason why calcium arsenate of arsenate of lime, which is used in combatting the boll weevil, and an insecticide, made of chlorine and bleaching soda, which is used in the manner of poison gas against the peach borer, should not be produced in adequate quantities at Muscle Shoals.

Demand For Lime Grows.

Predicting that the demand for arsenate of lime would soon reach 250,000 tons annually, Mr. Hooker asserted that the supply at present is only about 25,000 tons a year. It could be produced, he testified, as a by-product in the manufacture of ammonia for use in the fertilizer.

A research is being conducted, he added, in an effort to develop a specific insecticide similar to the paradiachlor to exterminate wheat rust and tobacco wild fire.

Flour manufacturers of the north-west, he added, are spending more than $250,000 a year on this investigation.

The value of the paradiachlor as a specific against the peach borer, he related, was set forth first in a pamphlet by the agriculture department which brought about a desultory and rather minor use of the product, followed in general with good results.

The pamphlet also served, he said, to indicate an outlet for considerable amount of paradiachlor benzol accumulated during the war.

"We supplemented the government bulletin," he continued, "with an active educational campaign among the peach growers of the South as well as New Jersey, Georgia, New York, and other fruit growing states."

"The result has been that not only has all the by-product paradiachlor been used, large quantities have been manufactured direct and have done an immense amount of good to the peach growers of the country."

Senator McNary, Republican, Oregon, asked Mr. Hooker if the saving in transportation on fertilizer would apply to the northwest and the witness replied that in his opinion cheaper rail rates would be limited to territory west of the Rocky Mountains.

Play Apparatus Being Installed

B. L. Malone, owner of the Malone park, announced today that a part of the playground equipment which will be installed for use of the children, already is set up and ready for use this afternoon. Children were asked to use the Third avenue entrance, which is nearing completion.

Flo Leeds Calls Son "Jay Stillman."

FLO LEEDS.

Flo Leeds, the beautiful woman named by Mrs. James A. Stillman in fighting the New York divorce suit of her husband, formerly president of the National City Bank, America's largest financial institution, has called for Europe. She engaged passage as Mrs. Florence Lincoln. She took with her her son, whose name appeared as "Master Jay A. Stillman" on the Olympic passenger list.

REVIVAL BEGUN AT FIRST CHRISTIAN

The attendance and interest at the First Christian church revival meeting last night was very gratifying to the workers of the church and to the pastor, Rev. Noble R. Edwards, who is doing the preaching for the series of meetings. To date five have signified a desire to join the First Christian church last night Rev. Edwards spoke from the words of invitation to the Master to Matthew, the Publican. Rev. Edwards told his hearers that Christ gave a "real challenge to a real man" when He commanded Matthew to follow Him.

The preacher stressed the fine example set by Matthew in "straightway" following in the lead of the Master. It was declared that Matthew's willingness and ability to make up his mind were strong factors in the making of "Saint Matthew, the great writer and disciple." It was taught by the preacher that those who put off salvation, did not want it.

The usual song service was led by the church choir, preceded and followed the sermon of last night.

The workers are planning to increase the number of penitents from five to many times that number before the end of this week, it was stated by officials of the church.

HOUSE BURNED; TWO OTHERS DAMAGED

What proved to be a disastrous fire despite the quick response made by both the Albany and Decatur fire departments occurred late Monday night on Tower avenue when a vacant house the property of L. C. Stout, was completely destroyed by fire, one house occupied by Noble Small near the Stout house, was almost destroyed while a third house occupied by J. R. Miller sustained a 25 per cent loss, according to the report of the fire chiefs.

Decatur and Albany firemen arrived at Tower avenue between 10 and 11 o'clock p. m. and were kept busy fighting the flames until 4 o'clock a. m.

Another fire of yesterday fought by both Decatur and Albany firemen occurred on Fifth avenue West Decatur, when a quantity of trash and grass burned. No buildings were burned in that fire.

The house of Harry Wyatt on Jackson street caught fire yesterday but the loss was slight.

BOTH DIVISIONS OF COUNTY COURT TO REMAIN IN FORCE

Decisions Clearing Up Status of Court Received Here

JUDGE LOWE TO TRY ALL CASES

Will Continue to Hold Sessions at More Than One Point

The Morgan County court stands and also the Hartselle division of that court stands according to decisions just received here by Judge Thomas W. Wert, from an official of the state supreme court.

This highest court of the state, in two decisions, one in the case of A. Polytsky versus A. G. Wilhite and the other in the case of A. Polytsky versus J. D. Johnson, decided that the Morgan County court, Hartselle division, had a legal right to exist. In one of these cases it was held that all cases appealed from city courts and from courts of justices of the peace go to the Morgan County court, and not direct to the circuit court.

On another one of the cases it was held that sufficient notice was given in the bill that established the Hartselle division of the Morgan County court, contrary to contention made some months ago in a petition sent forward to the supreme court praying that the Hartselle division of the Morgan County court be abolished.

It was also pointed out by attorneys, that cases originating within certain limits, must be decided by the Hartselle division of the Morgan County court, the supreme court having held to that effect some time ago in the case of Sam Anderson versus the State of Alabama.

Because the supreme court decided as it did in the so-called Sam Anderson case, Judge William T. Lowe, judge of the Morgan County court, for both divisions, the one held at the Morgan County court house and the one held at Hartselle, must try all cases in certain limits.

The decisions received by Judge Wert, it was pointed out, not only fully established the Morgan County court, but tended to strengthen the established right of the same county court, to hold court sessions at more than one point.

THAW DENOUNCES HIS PROSECUTOR

(Associated Press)

PHILADELPHIA, April 22—Just as the Harry K. Thaw sanity trial recessed for luncheon, Thaw rushed to the press table and rushed into an excited speech in denunciation of William Gray, who had been addressing the jury in opposition to Thaw's release. When he calmed down, Thaw said he had not been excited because of Mr. Gray's speech, but was nervous because of the danger of losing the jury if certain records were introduced.

Congregation to Meet Wednesday

The annual congregational meeting of the Westminster Presbyterian church will be held Wednesday evening. Reports covering the activities of the church during the past year will be rendered at that time by leaders of all departments of the church. Plans also will be discussed for the approaching fiscal year. Rev. L. F. Goodwin, the pastor, urged a large attendance from the membership.

PRESIDENT SPEAKS ON WORLD POLICIES TO PRESS OF NATION

Coolidge in Address to Associated Press Outlines Views

PRaises WORK OF GENERAL DAWES

Hails Return of Sanity in Government in Address Today

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK, April 22—President Coolidge announced in an address at the annual luncheon here today of the Associated Press that with firm establishment of a settlement of the German reparations question he would favor steps looking toward the calling of another world conference to consider further limitation of armaments and the codification of international law.

Disclaiming any ability to announce a formula that would guarantee the peace of the world, the president declared there were, however, certain definite things which should be done to relieve the world "of much of the burden of military armaments and diminish the probability of military operations."

"The Washington conference did a great deal to restore harmony and good will among the nations," the president said, "another purpose of a conference is the further limitation of competitive armaments. Much remains to be accomplished in that direction."

"It would appear to be impractical to attempt action under present conditions, but with a certain and definite settlement of German reparations firmly established, I should favor the calling of a similar conference to achieve such limitations of armaments and initiative plans for a codification of international law, should preliminary inquiries disclose that such a proposal would meet with a sympathetic response."

The United States, the president said, stands in position to take the lead in such an additional move toward world peace because America holds the respect of other nations and "our position is such that we trusted and our business institutions and government considered to be worthy of confidence."

Mr. Coolidge hailed the work of the Dawes Commission as unsurpassed in importance by anything that had transpired since the Armistice and declared there appeared "to be every reason to hope that the report offers a basis for practical solution of the reparations problem."

"I trust that it may commend itself to all the European governments interested as a method by which, through mutual concessions, they can arrive at a stable adjustment of the intricate and vexatious problem of reparations, and that such an outcome will provide for the restoration of Germany and the largest possible payments to other countries," he added.

"From all of this sordidness the affairs of government, of course, suffered. In some of it a few public officers were guilty participants. But the wonder is not that this was so much or so many, rather that it has been so little and so few. The encouraging thing at present is the evidence of a well-nigh complete return to normal methods of action, and a sane public opinion. The gravity of guilt of this kind is fully realized and publicly reprobated. There is an exceedingly healthy disposition to uproot it altogether and administer punishment wherever competent evidence of guilt can be produced. That I am doing and propose to continue."

Fight Continued to Legalize Beer

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 22—Additional argument in favor of legalizing the sale of 2.75 per cent beer were presented today to the house judiciary committee.

A dozen or more witnesses were on hand to continue the appeal for modification of the Volstead act, which was begun yesterday by representatives of the American Federation of Labor.

CULLMAN COUNTY ASKS EAST-WEST ROAD BUILT FIRST

Resolutions Adopted by the Commissioners Urging Project

WANTS ALABAMA BOARD TO ACT

Early Understanding of Plans Recalled by Officials

Cullman County, according to resolutions adopted by its commissioners court, does not want any more money spent on the north and south highway route, a part of the Bee Line route, until an east and west road is completed through the county.

Copies of the resolutions adopted by the commissioners court have been received here. The state highway commission is urged to take up an east and west road as the next project in the county. The resolutions, which are signed by Probate Judge Griffin and members of the board, are, in part, as follows:

"Whereas, in 1921, a committee composed of F. J. Cramton, Thomas E. Orr and W. S. Keller, representing the state highway commission of Alabama, came to Cullman county and met the county commissioners and the probate judge of said Cullman county, and the committee and commissioners court entered into a certain agreement whereby Cullman county was to build a road north of the new bridge at Garden City, connecting with the Bee Line highway, and in consideration for the building of this road by Cullman county, the next work that was to be done in Cullman county by the state highway commission was to be the building of a highway from the city of Cullman to the Marshall county line; and,

"Whereas, the county of Cullman complied with said contract and the county commissioners are informed that the state highway commission is now contemplating the building of a road north and south through Cullman and,

"Whereas, the county commissioners' court is opposed to the spending of the money on the north and south road when there is now a good road and will remain good with necessary repairs for many years to come."

"Therefore, be it resolved by the commissioners' court that it is very much opposed to the spending of the people's money on the Bee Line highway, making a road for tourists, when the conditions are so bad east and west of the railroad, and the said commissioners do hereby request and insist that the state highway commission of Alabama keep faith with the people who voted the bond issue, and also keep faith with the commissioners' court wherein said commission promised that the second project in this county would be the road built east and west."

SENATOR SHEPARD OPENS THE DEMOCRATIC FIGHT ON BONUS

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 22—Senator Sheppard, democrat, Texas, opening the bonus senate debate today assailed the insurance measure as a "shadow bonus" and declared it constituted another chapter in the perfidious drama enacted by the republican party on this subject.

He said he would support the bill under protest.

Senator Simmons, democrat, North Carolina, said he was positive that "if a vote can be had here on a cash option, entirely dissociated from apprehension of an executive veto" it would command an overwhelming majority.

Arrives Tuesday to Lead Revival

Rev. W. R. Beckett

Rev. W. R. Beckett, of Amory, Miss., will arrive here today to conduct the revival services at the Southside Baptist church of Albany. The revival was begun there Sunday, under the able leadership of the pastor, Rev. E. Floyd Olive, and the initial services were attended by large crowds and much interest was shown. Four additions to the church already have been reported.

Rev. Beckett comes here with the reputation of being a splendid speaker and it is expected that the revival series will draw hundreds to the South Albany church.

14 CONVICTED OUT OF 16 PRISONERS

The official record of criminal convictions made during the last week of the circuit court here, over which Judge James E. Horton presided and in which District Solicitor D. C. Almon and County Solicitor T. C. Almon led the prosecutions, shows the conviction of 14 out of a possible 16.

Solicitor Almon thus seems to be holding up well in his record for securing convictions, as shown by a recent comparative statement of records of convictions as sent out from Montgomery.

That record showed that District Solicitor Almon had convicted 88 out of every 100, of those prosecuted by him.

George Tolbert, a negro charged with murder and Robert Burt, another negro, charged with grand larceny were the two acquitted by juries following their trials last week.

In the case of Robert Burt interest centered in this acquittal because whereas, his alleged partner in the robbery of a local store, was convicted after getting the aid of an attorney and making a strong fight to prove his innocence, Burt came clear although he offered no resistance.

When Judge Horton asked Burt if he was guilty, he replied quietly, "No sir." When asked if he had a lawyer to defend him, Burt replied "No sir." "Do you want an attorney?" asked the judge, and Burt replied again "No sir." "Are you ready for trial?" said the judge. And Burt replied that he was, and Burt was set at liberty.

DRILLING RESUMED

Drilling has been resumed in the English oil well this week, after some time spent in placing additional casings in the well. The cement plug recently placed about 3,000 feet down in the well has been drilled out, and the big drill is pounding away for still lower depths.

MAKING FERTILIZER AT SHOALS IS EVIDENTLY AN EASY MATTER

The position taken a few years ago by almost everybody, except J. W. Worthington, a senator, and Henry Ford, was that fertilizers might be made at the Shoals, but that such a thing was very unlikely.

Now comes Mr. Hooker, who says that he and his people can not only make fertilizer at the Shoals, but that they can make that product in large quantities and very cheaply—much more inexpensively than can such a man as Henry Ford, says Mr. Hooker, in effect.

As to who Mr. Hooker is, he says or has others say, that he is a man who for a lifetime has been studying the Muscle Shoals project. Well, and good, but why should Mr. Hooker have remained as silent as he did, when all but a handful of people were determined to see the whole Shoals project junked for all time. It appears that a man who can do so much now, could have done a little something to save the Shoals a few years ago.

Unless some of the powers that seek to be change their minds a few more times, it seems fairly certain now, that fertilizers will be made at the Shoals, and that right cheaply.

Henry Ford seems to have done at least one thing—he has made believers of the doubting Thomases who used to say the Shoals were valueless and should be scrapped.

WORLD CHURCH COUNCIL DEMANDS ENTRY INTO LEAGUE OF NATIONS

In a recent statement signed by 500 delegates of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the churches, the call is made for the United States to find "entrance into the League of Nations or find some substitute association to which the other nations will agree."

The statement further says:

"The churches have stood for it (the League) from the beginning. They stood behind Mr. Wilson. When Mr. Harding became president they offered their support to him in a belief absolutely justified both by his words and those of his associates that America would take her rightful place in the family of nations. The Church's high expectations have not been fulfilled and we believe the Senate of the United States owes it to these millions of Christians to fulfill them. We cannot sit still and see the other nations of the world vainly striving to realize the common life while we stand apart and by our absence cripple their endeavor."

It will be noted that bitter disappointment is felt at the failure of the Senate and the republican administration to do anything worthwhile toward forming a world league against wars.

The statement calls upon the Senate to find place for America in the world court of justice in the following language:

"We demand, in the name of the American Church, that the Senate of the United States take immediate steps to make our nation a signatory power to the Court of International Justice. We respectfully petition the President of the United States to continue the crusade begun by our lamented President Harding to this great end. We believe, that, to stand outside the Court, violates our whole American tradition. We believe it also violates the will of the American people."

Other sections of the address, beginning at its beginning, are as follows:

"We, the 500 delegates assembled at the annual meeting of the World Alliance, for International Friendship through the churches and representing, we believe, the convictions of the church at large, desire to put ourselves upon record to the effect that the time has come for the United States to assume bold, confident leadership in the rescuing of our present civilization from chaos and in establishing a new world order based upon justice, co-operation and good will. Selfish nationalism and the basing of our civilization upon force plunged us into 1914. The world is rushing again toward the same precipice and our nation is doing nothing to avert the impending calamity. We argue details and covenants and who shall elect judges to a Court while Europe starves, selfishness rules, militarism rises again, gross injustices are practiced, the nations arm, and force reasserts itself in the rule of life.

"Against this isolation on the part of our nation we solemnly protest. We believe it unchristian and we believe it makes of no effect the sacrifices of the boys whose idealism we have just been commemorating. We believe the time has come for the United States to lay aside all selfishness and timidity and take her place in the councils of the nations. We believe all problems, especially those we helped to create, in Europe and Asia, are our problems, and our place is where they are being solved. We believe the United States has been called to serve the world, and should again manifest that sense of mission to which it rose in the war. We deprecate and condemn all talk of "America first and only" whether proceeding from the Senate or the market place. We believe that upon America rests the obligation to co-operate in the high endeavor to save the world and build a new order wherein dwelleth righteousness."

THE MCKENNA REPORT

The McKenna committee report dealing with Germany's present foreign assets is notable for its precision and preciseness. Its finding is a practical, commonsense determination reached by the most direct processes. The committee declined to plunge into the maze of official German financial statistics prepared for propaganda purposes, which had to be avoided also by the Dawes group.

Instead, original data were depended on and conclusions were drawn from them not very different from those at which sensible persons everywhere had arrived. The experts found the key to the situation in the paper mark swindle. Through this gigantic fraud the Reich not only wiped out its bonded and floating debt, but also deposited abroad in sound foreign currencies an amount equal to that paid by Germany on the reparation account. Selling worthless paper currency to more than 1,000,000,000 gullible foreigners, Berlin piled up between 7,000,000,000 and 8,000,000,000 gold mark credits. On January 1 last the total German payments to the reparation commission were only 8,411,000,000 gold marks, and these included the value of the Saar Basin mines, allotted to France. No shiffter financial confidence game has ever been played by an unscrupulous debtor nation.

Germany's present foreign credit balance of about 8,000,000,000 gold marks exists through chicanery. But it is a potent factor in the reparation problem, since it allows Germany an ample balance on which to do business abroad. It makes possible a moderate sized temporary loan to the Reich for the payment resumption period. It falsifies the claim that Germany defaulted in December, 1922, because she could not pay. She was able to pay then and quit only because the paper mark sales had run out and she did not fancy turning over any of her own money to the reparation commission.—New York Herald Tribune.

THE PRESS OF THE STATE ON THE PASSING OF EDITOR OF THE DAILY

Editor W. R. Shelton is no more. With him dies the finest gentleman and the cleanest editor to our knowledge in all Alabama. As an editor ourselves of nearly half a century's standing, we know whereof we speak.

Before he came to this city, several attempts had been made to plant a daily paper here, but all failed till he took hold of the proposition and made it a success. It is not yet any gold mine for its owners, but it is as good as the needs and is able to support at present, and it is ready and willing to "grow up with the country," a fact as is certain.

A year ago no one dreamed that Mr. Shelton's life was threatened by illness. He seemed always to be cheerful, kindly and courteous and ever ready to help others. His death will leave a vacancy in civic and social circles which will be difficult to fill.

We hate to lose so good a man amongst us. As a friend of the writer he stood very high in our estimation; and although a business competitor, that fact was always lost sight of in our personal relationship.

To his dear wife, and to all his surviving relatives, we offer our sincerest sympathy and condolence.

C. J. HLDRETH

PASSING OF AN HONORED EDITOR

With the going of Editor W. R. Shelton of The Albany-Decatur Daily one of Nature's noblemen passed to his reward.

Right living would not be worth while if it did not promise rich rewards for such men as our departed friend.

Editor W. R. Shelton honored the craft to which he belonged. He was an inspiration to his church and the community that really loved him.

Editor Shelton builded well here and for the realm to which his soul has gone. He will be missed by the press of Alabama and a sadness will steal over every editor in the state when he learns that Shelton's sweet smile and kind and helpful words are forever stilled by the cold, cruel hand of death.

Rest, brother, in that well earned sleep, and awaken where no one ever wakes to mourn.

To the widow and the orphan and the departed friend The Huntsville Star would bid them place their trust in Him who doeth all things well. Yet a little while and what a wonderful reunion there will be—father, mother and son.—Huntsville Star.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH SHELTON

When an editor serves his community long and faithfully, the evidences of his influences may not be so separate and distinct that one may clearly detect them. Nevertheless, the sum total of his effort persists, though it be merged with the community effort along the same lines. Indeed, unless an editor's effort is so merged with the community effort that it does not stand out in contrast, it is probable that his influence is largely spent in futile remonstrance. An editor that serves his proper function cannot escape being a leader of public opinion, but he must not be so far ahead of his people that they lose sight of his leadership. It is believed that William R. Shelton, late of the Albany-Decatur Daily, was one of these editors whose influence for good in his community was pronounced and has been an intimate factor in that community's development. Doubtless those who knew him best can point out many items in that locality's progress which are largely owed to his intelligent expression of opinion.—Age-Herald.

DEATH OF WILLIAM R. SHELTON WILL BE GREATLY DEPLORED

Clean, honest, intelligent journalism in Alabama has suffered a great loss in the death of William R. Shelton, publisher of the Albany-Decatur Daily, who succumbed to an operation at a Nashville hospital Tuesday morning. His body will be laid to rest in the Albany cemetery this afternoon.

Mr. Shelton was born at Louisville, Ky., 63 years ago. He was early apprenticed to the printing trade and in the pursuit of that calling he traveled all over the United States. As the years crept upon him, however, there came a longing to return to the land of Dixie, so in 1911 he founded the Albany-Decatur Daily. Ever since he has served the Twin Cities in that growing section of the state in a most admirable manner. His paper has always been enterprising, courageous and well managed. It will remain for many years a monument to his memory, for it was founded on principles of cardinal virtue that make for longevity.

Mr. Shelton has been an active and loyal worker in the ranks of the Alabama Press Association for many years. He was quiet and unassuming in his demeanor, but those who knew him intimately came to love him for his many winsome traits and to admire him for his honesty of purpose. He was a factor for righteousness in the public affairs of this state and will be greatly missed.—Anniston Star.

EDITOR AND GOOD CITIZEN DIES

The newspaper profession of Alabama sustained a loss this week when Editor W. R. Shelton, of the Albany-Decatur Daily, passed to his eternal reward, and the Twin Cities lost a fine citizen. A high-class gentleman, of the old school, Mr. Shelton had a personality that endeared him to a host of people, his genial manner and friendly disposition being felt wherever he was known. Unqualified regret on the part of the members of the profession throughout the state is felt at his departure.—Florence Times.

AN EDITOR PASSES

The press report of yesterday chronicled the passing of William Randolph Shelton, editor and founder of the Albany-Decatur Daily.

All who knew Mr. Shelton heard the news of his death with genuine and sincere sorrow. His nobility of character, his unswerving honesty, and absolute sincerity, and withal his gentleness and forbearance, went to make up a personality that drew friends with the surety of a magnet.

The Twin Cities lost an outstanding citizen, a mighty power for good and progress in the death of their editor. He loved his twin towns—he believed in their future—and more than anything else he believed in the people who made up the Twin Cities.

When last he visited Florence he said to the writer, "The folks at Albany-Decatur are the best folks in the world—they deserve the great prosperity which will be theirs when this wonderful valley is fully developed."

We feel that we have lost a valued friend and our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the widow and son who are left behind.—Florence News.

The many friends of Mr. W. R. Shelton, editor and manager of the Albany-Decatur Daily, will be sorry to know of his continued illness at the Protestant Hospital, Nashville, Tenn., where he has been for several weeks. Only those who know Mr. Shelton intimately and have been associated with him in business, can fully appreciate the prince of a gentleman he is at all times. He at all times exemplifies kindness in its truest form; honesty and sincerity he practiced, and to these cardinal virtues he was as true as the needle to the pole. It was his steadfast policy in the conduct of the daily paper of which he was, and is, its heads, to never wound or leave a scar. He would sacrifice temporal rewards and news from the columns of his paper rather than wound the feelings of any. In a world where we see much of sordid aims and ambitions cropping out from the acts of those in place and power there never was a time when the world needed more men like W. R. Shelton, who hoped the best at all times and the darkest hours; practiced the best in his daily life, and sought to bind up and heal scars rather than make wounds.—Hartselle Herald.

Resolutions

Of respect to the memory of John H. Kitchens, died March 29th, 1924. A truly faithful brother Mason, has been called from the active duties and responsibilities of this life, to render an account of his stewardship to the Great Architect of the Universe, before whom all mankind must soon appear.

Brother Kitchens was a man of sterling worth to his lodge, and the fraternity. A good man in his community, ever respectful to the call of duty, cheerfully giving himself in service to his fellow-men.

We sorrow at his passing from us, and sympathize with his loved ones, let us strive to keep in memory the good he accomplished in the world, it will live after him through all the days.

We commend his loved ones to the God of all grace, who is able to heal the broken hearted, may they think of the goodness of God, in sparing their loved one to be with them these many years, and remember to look forward to a happy reunion in that brighter world to which he has gone.

Be it resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased brother, under seal of the lodge No. 491, and that a copy be published in the Albany-Decatur Daily and a copy kept for record in the lodge.

Respectfully submitted,

Resolutions

The Junior Order of American Mechanics in regular assembly desires to go on record in the following resolutions concerning the life and character of the late William R. Shelton, a dearly beloved friend of each and every Member of this lodge.

Resolved, that we, as a lodge, have seen fit to call Mr. Shelton from works to reward, we humbly bow in submission, but in doing so we wish to declare our unending affection for our departed brother; therefore be it resolved first, that our love for Mr. Shelton leads us to say that in his death the cities of Albany and Decatur have lost one of their best friends and ardent well wishers; that the state and the country have lost a sincere patriot, the church of his choice a devout member, his family a devoted father and husband, and we who desire to honor his memory a trust-worthy and affectionate friend.

Resolved, further that in deepest sorrow that we realize that we shall see the face of our dear friend no more on this earth, but in joy, faith and hope we look forward to seeing our departed comrade in the upper and better world.

Resolved, that we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family of the deceased and to his immediate relatives who are still living. And we wish to remind them that we ever stand ready to repay to them the many acts of kindness and deeds of love of Mr. Shelton that have helped and benefited us in the days that are past and gone forever.

We would respectfully remind those bowed down in grief over the death of Mr. Shelton, that we are taught that he is better off now than when in this vale of tears and to remind that "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

Resolved, finally that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the permanent records of this lodge, that copy be transmitted to the immediate family of Mr. Shelton, and that a copy be given the Albany-Decatur Daily for publication.

What Lillian Did to Dicky and Dicky to Madge.

SPEAKING of telepathy? Lillian gibed as the telephone rang just as I had predicted Dicky would call up.

"It may not be Dicky," I said as I rushed to the telephone with the thought which is ever in my mind when absent from home. "Mother Graham may be telephoning. Perhaps Junior is—"

"Better let me answer," she said quietly.

She had reached the telephone before me, and already had her hand on the receiver. I nodded an assent to her questioning eyes, and after a second, her careless "Hello, Dicky," banished all anxiety from my mind, and I prepared to enjoy what I could hear of the conversation.

"Yes, I'm here, naturally," she carried, evidently in answer to a perfunctory question. "They haven't put an extension phone from your apartment to an East River motor boat, as yet, and that's the only way I could have answered you before now. What's that? Indeed I won't!" This with a great show of indignation. "I'm having too good a time. You know how I'm talking to you, Dicky-bird."

She turned to me, whispering the words, "pippin of a crouch," with one hand closed over the mouthpiece, and then listened attentively.

Lillian's Proposition.

"Yes, she's here, and listen to me, old dear. We're both tired to death and we're going to crawl into the bed in your room. We'll let down the davenport in the living room, but Allah help you if you make any noise. Oh, you're not coming home tonight! So much the better."

"Oh, by the way, Dicky-bird," she carried, "I was asking Madge just now if you people wouldn't sublet your apartment to me while you are gone to Michigan with your mother, and Madge is at the turn, willing and that she thought you would be, for you were speaking of subletting just before you went out tonight. How about it?"

She craved her free arm around her head in a comfortable slouch, the while she grinned joyously, as she listened.

"Let me hear," I said. "Do you want to have your telephone service discontinued? Such language! What's the matter? Don't you consider me a responsible tenant? Oh, you weren't talking to me. No, I don't very well know it. I've heard you in action before, dearest, as you very well know. Call Madge? Sure."

She turned to me, and held out the receiver. I took it and hoped that my voice was staidier than my fingers as I spoke Dicky's name.

"What's the big idea?" he snapped. "Confiding all your troubles to old Lil?"

Dicky is "Peeved."

"Oh, no, indeed, not all," I carried, solving my conscience with the fact that there were several minor details of our disagreement which I had omitted. "But she wants the apartment and you said you wanted to sublet it."

"What I've meant sublet? I never said any such thing," he growled, and I smiled at the familiar phrase.

Dicky always forgets three-fourths of the things he says when he is angry, and furiously denies them if they are called to his attention.

"Really?" I cooed. "I certainly must go to an ear specialist, for I was sure I heard you say it."

"Oh, go to the—," Dicky began, then changed his objection to a heavily satiric inquiry: "What do you propose to change old Lil?"

"A good stiff price," I returned cheerily. "There are so many extra attractions here, you know."

The last sentence slipped in. I really had not meant to utter it, nor did I mean anything special by it. But it evidently found a vulnerable spot in my husband's temper.

"That's about the cheapest piece of talk I ever heard from you!" he stormed. "This settles it. I was going to beg your pardon, but now I'll be—"

"Suppose I beg yours, instead," I said softly.

I was sure that no one save Dicky would hear me, for Lillian, with her usual tact, had slipped out of the room when I had taken the telephone.

"Don't trouble yourself," came the ironic reply, and then I heard the unmistakable click of the telephone receiver as he slammed it on the hook.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES: Being Happy at Sixty

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Features Service, Inc.

SHE'S sad and she's sorry, and the worst of it is, she's old, too. Sixty years old and very tired and rather sick of the thing we love to call life.

And her husband—Oh, he isn't sick of life at all!

He's delighted with it, or has been, up to the last few months.

He's sixty-five years old and he dresses like a young fellow of thirty or thirty-five. He belongs to a fairly good club, plays golf on Saturdays and Thursdays and is rather liked among his business associates.

Down-town he's generous and good-natured, at home he's stingy and cross.

Down-town he's a great story teller and nobody laughs so hard or so easily as he.

She Should Stick

At home his wife is astonished if he says more than good morning and good evening and what on earth have you been doing, you and that cook of yours to run the gas bill up so high.

But that isn't the worst of it.

The man is silly about women—every woman he sees, except his wife. His wife has always known and always tried to hide it, but lately his affairs have been so numerous that she feels as if she couldn't stand it another minute, and the man is ill and he's quitting business and going to retire on a fairly decent income and she feels as if she couldn't stand it another day.

What shall she do? Divorce him and start out in the world all alone?

That's what she has written to ask.

What would you tell her if you were in my place?

I'll tell you what I'm going to tell her: I'm going to tell her to stick to her home and to her husband. What, start out to face the world alone—at sixty?

What would she do, where would she go?

It's all very well for her indignant friends to tell her that they wouldn't stand it for a minute, but how many of them would put a roof over her head and food into her mouth if she did leave it, after all?

When everything is said and done, everything good and everything bad, this husband of hers is the very best friend she has in the world.

He knows he's doing wrong, he knows he's made and is making a bitter mistake. The way to deal with him is to go right on acting as if he was the best husband in the world. Don't box him with too much affection, don't fret about him, don't pay any attention to him, except to see that his home is well looked after and that he can find comfort and peace of mind there—if he can't find them anywhere else on earth. Go and see your friends, have little parties of your own, read interesting books, cultivate a garden.

Make Life Fine

What a pity she hasn't children of her own, poor woman. Well, never mind, there must be some other children somewhere she can love and help. Live your own life, my dear unhappy woman, and live it not bitterly, not sadly, not angrily, but calmly and naturally and normally and your husband will see that you are the one real thing in his life, after all.

It will not be long now till the quarrels and the recrimination and the sadness will be over for you both.

Make these last few years something sweet and noble and fine. Sixty and sixty-five—wouldn't you think they would have learned something at the School of Life—by now?

Marriage is something more than what some people call love. It is duty and sacrifice and real devotion to the interests of someone else.

Stop trying to be happy, my dear, and try to be sensible. And even at sixty you will find happiness waiting for you around the corner.

Solving the Problem of an Alluring Flower Garden for Summer Days.

THE lure of the garden is felt even in cities, where potted plants get unwanted care and are accompanied by new ones when their owners begin to feel the call of Spring. Flower and seed catalogs become the subject of most careful consideration.

The lay of the land and the amount of sunshine that we may count upon each day help settle the question of how much of our land is really available. Then it is the small garden the problem becomes a process of elimination in our list to see what we can and what we cannot have. If you are going in for flowers entirely, select those suitable for picking; those that will stand the sun and perhaps a little neglect in keeping them watered should you run off on week-end visits and leave them entirely to Mother Nature's care.

Sweet peas are a joy if they are kept picked every day. In August their stems are apt to grow short and they do not seem to flower as large and as freely, so it is wise to have something at that time to take their place.

Geraniums, of which there are several kinds, mignonette, heliotrope and one or more clumps of iris supply sweet flowers for cutting. Garden pink, candytuft and phlox are especially when the peppers begin to ripen.

Poppies planted along the hedge row are wonderfully decorative. They blossom so freely and are so fragile and colorful that one can overlook the sorry fact that they have no perfume. A corner of ragged sailors is always attractive. Cornflowers are pliable, too, and there are so few blue flowers that they are valuable for decorative purposes.

In the way of garden equipment, a long-spouted watering-pot will be found useful. The hose is wide. An all-steel trowel will last much longer than those with wooden handles, which are always coming off if the digging is a little dry and hard. The small weeder or digging fork is very useful around flower beds. The small wheel hoe is convenient if the beds are evenly planted so that the hoe can be run between the rows to cultivate the ground a bit before watering it.

A small heart-shaped hoe is convenient to dig drills with if there are a lot of seeds to be planted. The small all-brass pointed dibbler is a great help in transplanting tomato, cabbage and other plants. We don't need many tools, but we do need the right ones, for they make the work light and easy.

Particularly in Germany the clock manufacturers delighted to tell time by amusing and surprising devices. Some of these clocks are still in existence and crowds collect to see them perform.

The Swiss and the French vied with the German in clock manufacturing; but went in for more delicate and finer clocks than the ponderous German inventions. The ill-fated King Louis XVI. learned to be a clock maker himself, and he collected thousands of beautiful and astonishing examples of the art.

The cuckoo clock, a favorite wedding present in America, is a very simple example of the performing clocks of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLEIFFE

She Chats About an Overblouse Costume for Any Time of Day.

THIS morning I had the pleasure of buying something at a wholesale price. It was a skirt and I'm delighted with the purchase.

Leah, a friend of mine, remarked that she was going to a wholesaler's to look at skirts.

"Do take me along," I urged. "You know that I can't bear to hear of anybody getting a bargain without wanting to get in on it, too."

"Well, sometimes these wholesale firms are not very well disposed toward private customers," Leah warned me. "But if you'll be very nice they may let me come in with me."

So at noon we hurried down the street together. A short ride on the subway landed us in the heart of the wholesale garment district.

A few minutes later we found ourselves in an attractive show room where a very kindly clerk hung skirts and skirts upon the racks for us to see and admire.

The only trouble is, there are so many lovely ones from which to choose," I complained to Leah.

"That is a drawback," she returned.

"But I have the advantage because I knew just what I wanted before I came," she informed me.

"What is it?" I asked.

"A pleated crepe," she answered. "They are so practical and attractive. I think the nice part about these pleated skirts is that the pleats really stay in."

She chose a lovely black crepe, with group pleating, showing a wide flat waist and then three little ones. In the meantime I wandered about, seeing what I could see.

"What is this material?" I asked the man, as I indicated a brown and tan checked skirt hanging on the rack.

"That's alpaca," he answered.

What the Press Agents Say

Amid the fanfare of trumpets, the piercing notes of a steam callopie, the prancing of horses, the squealing of monkeys and the roaring of lions, Jackie Coogan runs away and joins a circus in his latest First National picture, "Circus Days," which comes to the Princess theater on Monday and Tuesday.

Heralded as the finest picture that the inimitable Jackie has yet made, it is the sort of story that should appeal to every boy or girl—young or old.

Driven from home and his widowed mother, Toby Tyler, the youthful hero played by the star, starts his adventures under the "big top" as a peasant salesman. His vicissitudes are many, but Dame Fortune finally looks upon him with favor, and, through a sudden accident, Toby finds himself the star of the circus, and the one big hero of the sawdust ring in the eyes of a tiny equestrienne.

"Circus Days" is adapted from James Otis' noted story, "Toby Tyler, or Ten Weeks with a Circus." Eddie Cline is the director, and a notable cast, including Barbara Tennant, Russell Simpson, Claire McDowell, Cesare Gravini and Peaches Jackson, appear in support of the star. "Circus Days" is a Sol Lesser production presented through Associated First National.

CENTRAL HI EASILY
DEFEATS FLORENCE

Central High galloped away easily with Coffee County High on Saturday afternoon in their initial appearance on the diamond here by the score of 9-1. Pepper was at his best and struck out 16. Frequently three men were forced to retire by the knockout route during an inning.

Both teams played well considering the grounds which are still under construction and few errors marred the play. Stripling of Florence struck out six men, but was wild at times and this accounted for the one sided score.

The entire Central team hit well and Odum garnered a pair of two sack-ers. Pepper was accredited with one two ply blow. Only one of the extra base variety was noted for the Florence batting order.

The local hurling ace would have been accredited with a shutout victory except for the fact that a close decision on a batted ball went against him and the visitors scored their lone run.

Central is scheduled to meet Morgan County High on Wednesday at Hartselle.

Voice of People

The Editor,
The Albany-Decatur Daily,
Albany, Ala.

Dear Sir:—

When a young man can go to college he is fortunate. When he can go to the best college in the United States he is more fortunate, but when he has an opportunity to be appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy, whose graduates have an education second to none, and whose students, with rank of Midshipman, U. S. Navy, are paid sufficient money to meet every expense incident to attending this Academy, and whose summer cruise takes them to foreign ports for leave and liberty for two months each year, then he has an opportunity which is worth more to him than priceless gifts of gold and property.

Mr. Floyd M. Fletcher, whose home is with his parents at Madison, was appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy in 1919, after attending Marion Institute by Representative Almon, as one of the very few he is entitled to so appoint.

Mr. Fletcher has taken advantage of the unlimited opportunities to engage in athletics at Annapolis. Every midshipman is encouraged to engage actively in some form of athletics, and has won his letters in class fencing and Varsity fencing. His physical development has been kept up parallel with his mental training, and when he is graduated, and receives his commission as an Ensign, U. S. Navy, his body and mind will be trained to the work with an advantage over the graduates of most any other school in America. Thanks to his pay as a midshipman, no graduate of Annapolis should have the heavy handicap of debts incurred in college, which faces so many graduates of other institutes of learning. Any man with these advantages is certain to stand high in the esteem of his fellow-men. He is an asset to any community, and to his country. Certainly no man would hesitate to accept an opportunity such as this.

Yet, the navy has a quota of 100 men annually, which it is allowed to send to Annapolis, to enter the Naval Academy on a par with those appointed from civil life by Senators and Congressmen. The Navy appointments are given to young enlisted men who have had at least two years' high school and who are under 20 years of age and who have had one year of service with the Navy. These men are given a six months special preparatory course by the Navy before final examination for entrance to the Academy.

Because of the limits imposed, the U. S. Navy has never appointed its total quota of 100 men; has never actually used over 70 per cent of this quota. There are thousands of young men who do not know of this opportunity of obtaining a higher education. Thousands of young men have finished high school, and have not seen a way to continue in school, and so have gone to work, while these appointments have been waiting for them.

Surely there should be a way to bring this opportunity to the attention of those worthy young men who will never have a chance to continue through college.

It is requested that this item be published in your newspaper, if at all practicable.

Yours Very Truly,
C. R. Crandall,
Lieutenant, U. S. Navy

Tennessee Valley Printing Company,
Albany, Ala.
Gentlemen:—

Feeling profound sorrow at the sad news of the loss of a beloved friend, Mr. W. R. Shelton, I wish to express to you and his family my most sincere and deepest sympathy in your bereavement. I feel we shall do well to emulate his example of comradeship, patriotism and sincerity, and know our community has been inspired by his life, and his memory will prove a benediction. I shall miss him.

Sincerely,
David Gibson

MITES ON CHICKS

By J. C. FORD
County Demonstration Agent

There are a number of kinds of mites that infest chickens. Some of these are quite serious, while others are of little consequence.

The ordinary gray or red mite is the most common and does the most injury to farm flocks. In the South this mite is active all the year, but worst during the hot months than in winter. In appearance this mite is very small, but visible to the naked eye red when filled with blood and gray at other times. Under favorable conditions, they multiply exceedingly fast. The eggs are laid in cracks and crevices and protected places about the roosts, houses or nests. Blood sucking is done principally at night though sitting hens are continually worried. During the day time the mites seek hiding places about the roosts, though a few that have not at the coming of day stay on the chickens till the next night.

When the house is moderately infested with mites, the hens will fall off in egg production and the chickens all lose flesh. As the infestation becomes heavier, the birds become pale about the heads and grow light and weak and easily contract diseases of various kinds. Young chickens and sitting hens are sometimes killed, and sitting hens frequently quit their nests because of mites.

There are a number of treatments that are thoroughly effective for the destruction of mites, but probably the simplest and most satisfactory for the average farmer is plain kerosene or coal oil. It is not necessary to treat the fowls; only the house, roosts and nests need attention. Clean out all droppings and carry to the garden or field. Remove all straw from the nests. Then with a spray pump, an ordinary floor sprinkler or a tin can or small bucket with a few very small nail holes in the bottom, wet the roost poles, nest boxes and if necessary the walls with kerosene. Two or three thorough treatments should be sufficient, no matter how badly the house may be infested at first.

Carbolineum is even more effective than kerosene, but is usually not kept in stock by local dealers. Anyone interested in this subject will find useful information in Farmers' Bulletin in my office.

Another mite causes scaly leg in chickens. The scaly-leg mite gets under the scales on the legs and sometimes about the head and causes the formation of thick, rough scales. Sometimes this gets quite serious making the bird lame and causing the loss of its leg. Kerosene will cure this trouble. Wet the feet and shanks well, being careful not to get too much about the knee joints nor on the feathers. If the scales have not completely disappeared within thirty days, repeat the treatment.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Cleveland, of Benicia, Cal., a daughter, Mary Elizabeth on April 14th. Mrs. Cleveland will be pleasantly remembered as Miss Cornelia Hopkins of Birmingham who visited here many times as the guest of Mrs. Reed Rogers and Miss Marie McGlawn.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSIONER TESTIFIES IN DAUGHERTY PROBE

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 22—Chairman Houston Thompson, of the federal trade commission, today laid before the Daugherty investigation committee further evidence to support his testimony that anti-trust cases were not properly prosecuted by Mr. Daugherty after facts warranting legal action had been developed by the commission and turned over to the justice department.

The commission chairman related how he and his colleagues uncovered price fixing and coercive measures among lumber producers in an investigation beginning in 1919. The result of this inquiry, he said, were laid before the justice department before Mr. Daugherty took office.

CHESTER E. JOHNSON IS A VISITOR HERE

Chester E. Johnson, state fire marshal for Alabama, was in Albany and Decatur for a short while during Tuesday morning, on his way to Sheffield, Florence and Tusculum.

While here the Fire Marshal visited a number of buildings where fire escapes have been erected recently and where others are needed and made inspections. He also visited the scene of a rather disastrous fire during Tuesday night on Tower avenue, where two houses were destroyed and a third badly damaged. Mr. Johnson questioned persons who were residents of the neighborhood and others who were at work about the larger house that was destroyed, seeking to arrive at a conclusion as to the origin of the flames but was still uncertain as to the origin when he left here.

"I don't know any news," said the Fire Marshal, "except things in general seem to be moving along in very good shape. There is no news in politics, so far as I know, there being little interest in the statewide elections, except in the race for game and fish commissioner. I cannot think of anything, except a re-election of Andrew G. Patterson, as president of the Alabama Public Service Commission by a huge majority, and I expect to see that as one of the results of the May 18 election."

"No, sir, I know I don't; but you do, and I thought you would be late."

Wheat is the Fuel of Life

You can get the most food value out of wheat by eating bakings that are made from good plain flour. A dependable baking powder must be employed or you do not get the full nutritious value of the wheat—nor will your bakings be as palatable and easily digested.

The same results cannot be had if you use Self-Rising Flour, which are improperly packed in porous sacks or bags, thus allowing absorption of moisture from the air. Food authorities and physicians agree that bakings that do not raise properly are bad for health. Such foods are hard to digest and in time cause stomach trouble.

Mothers who are interested in the proper growth and health of their children (and all mothers should never use anything but a good brand of plain flour and a time-tested leavener, such as Calumet—the economy Baking Powder.

Calumet has more than the ordinary leavening strength. It raises every baking to its height of nutritious value. It is pure and dependable—does not look for a substitute there is none.

Use Calumet and be positive of wholesome nutritious and economical foods.

BEAUTIFUL STORY OF EASTER RETOLD BY REV. W. B. STRONG

One of the most acceptable and forceful of the many Easter sermons was that of Rev. W. B. Strong, pastor of the Westside Presbyterian church, delivered in the Twin Cities Sunday. Rev. Strong spoke his inspiring message without notes or reference to a manuscript. He deeply impressed those who heard him with his piety, ability and faith in a better day. Rev. Strong did not speak at the night service at his church, but gave way to "Christ Minute Men."

Rev. Strong's sermon as given in part below was preached at the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning to attentive and enthusiastic hearers:

"Easter is called 'The day of immortal hope,' began the preacher, emphatically. 'It is the day of the appointed hope, the day of the appointed hope, the day of the appointed hope. Amidst the joy and struggle, many a soul has been ground down and starved out of life. The opportunities for spiritual development and mental attainment, however, are everywhere. The environment, the life in proportion to one's capabilities or aptitude. The soul has been subordinated to the body, and the hunger for the eternal has been hushed because of the cry, which is so persistent from a temporal for its daily bread."

"But this Easter morning we awake to a brighter hope of eternal day, where the thirst of soul shall be satisfied, where life shall not consist of a search for bread, where the cry of the body shall no longer shut out the cry of the soul, where the soul itself hears the voice of eternal truth and learns the deep things of God, where want and poverty are replaced by the 'many mansions' and a competency of unsearchable riches."

"The resurrection of Christ not only means a better hope and an assured heaven, but it means a happier world here. It stands for a loftier ideal, a better self, and the regeneration of the world."

Text Given

"Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the First Fruits of them that slept. I Cor. 15:20," quoted the preacher. And he continued, "The resurrection of Jesus Christ is a historical fact by the testimony of competent witnesses and by the witness of related facts and results."

"The disciples did not depend upon general hearsay, or even upon the testimony of others. They themselves had seen again and again the risen Christ and what was more, they had eaten with him, had talked with him, and from him had received definite personal orders, as formally.

"From the very beginning the news of the risen Christ was openly announced and instantly the news spread abroad until all Judea and all Galilee had heard it. The Apostles challenged the world to deny it, and the challenge has never been accepted. Would it not be a fact that if Jesus had not risen that he would have gradually sunk out of sight and lost his hold upon men? But the very opposite of that is true. Christ's marvelous and matchless influence over men, instead of lessening, began at once to widen and strengthen, every year adding to its prestige and power. This can be explained only as the vital touch and impact of a great living personality that is still among us. 'The Risen Christ.'"

Hence the conviction, everywhere abroad in the world today, symbolized by these beautiful flowers and celebrated by the glad Easter music, that Jesus is risen from the dead and is therefore alive forevermore. Our belief in the resurrection of Jesus becomes more convincing and daily more and more irresistible and impregnable as Jesus continues to stride with giant steps down the ages and sweep the world into his train."

"The resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead is more than a historical fact. It is a spiritual force in the lives of men. Through fellowship with the risen Christ, men rise from a death in sin to a life in holiness, from a life of lethargy and indifference to a life of activity, energy and power; from a life of carelessness and slothfulness to a life of perfected beauty and glory; yea into the likeness of the Risen Christ Himself. 'Now is Christ risen from the dead.' 'Ye are risen with Christ.' In Christ the believer is a risen man."

"The resurrection of Christ is more than a historical fact and more than a spiritual force. It is prophecy and hope and assurance of a future life. The old question 'even or pre-historic man' was 'If a man die shall he live again?' The message of the risen Christ is that there is another world and another life. The message of the risen Christ is that death is just an outgoing, an unfolding, an enlarging of the real life. The message of the risen

Christ is that this little world is but a preparatory place and that the grave is but a brief passageway into a higher world: where he with all Saints of all ages, unhampered and unincumbered shall serve Him forever.

"Beloved, it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he appears that we shall be like Him. Bless His Holy Name that will be glory enough for me."
